An over two-dozen page report has been released by chief Trump pollster Tony Fabrizio, in which three key factors are offered for why Trump was defeated in 2020.

> –hemorrhaging White support
>
> -disapproval of coronavirus management
> – a voter perception that he wasn't "honest and trustworthy"

Let's discuss each of these in turn. First, it is true that Trump lost about five-percent of White men in 2020 and gained among every other demographic group. However, the picture is not just part of the Trump phenomenon. For a long time now, going back to the Obama years, the GOP has steadily been losing suburban Whites to the Democrat party. These are people who are doing okay financially, perhaps you could the last of what is left of the middle class, and whose values are typically the annoying liberal type. The kinds of people who think putting their pronouns in their bio is more useful than giving people a living wage. Because here's the truth about wokeness, it is popular precisely because no sacrifice is required. You can simply say you want to treat people equally, while you go back to supporting the agenda of the very corporations you claim to oppose.

Secondly, the why in which Trump handled Covid was beyond disgraceful, but there are two key aspects to his failure here. The first is in regards to what he said and the second is in what he failed to do. What he said about Covid, making it a politicized issue in which it the “Chinese virus” was a “democrat hoax” designed to tank the economy and steal the election from the greatest president in history. We know he knew about the dangerous nature of Covid at the very beginning of 2020 and refused to act for fear it would spook the markets. He made fun of older people as expendable and his lemmings went on TV and encouraged people to not wear masks or social distance because to do so would be to undermine the freedom to die. And I won’t even expound on the horror of telling people to inject Lysol or similar insanities. But then there is the question of what he didn’t do, which is to provide everyone monthly checks, bailout small business and not corporations, fund parents to homeschool their kids as well as schools and provide everyone with Medicare for All.

Lastly, Trump’s distrust among the population at large stems from the intense polarized nature of American politics during his presidency it is true. But it also comes from a place of fatigue, where people where interested just in having a president who did his job instead of making the news cycle all about himself 24/7 with endless tweeting. It is in Trump’s egotistical nature to prefer spotlight over lamplight, and voters had had enough. In the era of Trump, the constant chasing of news sources to find out the truth of this or that left people exhausted and confused about what was actually true. In the end, Trump lost because he was a buffoon more interested in his own personal gain than in the country he presided over. If you are a ruler, you must intensely love and cherish the people over whom you have power. If you do not, you will fail.
